Introduction

The Library has gathered together from various sources, largely as gifts from individuals and societies, especially the local D. A. R. and U. D. C. organizations, a working collection of Genealogy and Family History.

These books include works of a general nature as well as heraldry, genealogical magazines, coats of arms and family and state history.

Acquisitions are being received constantly, but the Library has never before published a list of genealogy and related material, so it is hoped the present list will serve as a basis or guide to this collection.

In order that patrons may have the advantage of any and all books in the Genealogical Collection at their command for research, no books will be loaned from this room.

The Genealogical Room opens from the Reference department and is easily accessible, being equipped with tables and chairs for study.

Persons having family histories or related material are invited to place copies in this Library, and gifts of a genealogical nature from organizations will be appreciated.

Introduction

The Library has gathered together from various sources, largely as gifts from individuals and societies, especially the local D. A. B. and U. B. C. organizations, a working collection of Genealogy and Family history.

These books include works of a general nature as well as family, genealogical magazines, coats of arms and family and name history.

Acquisitions are being received constantly, but the Library has never before published a list of Genealogy and related material, so it is hoped the present list will serve as a basis or guide to this collection.

In order that patrons may have the advantage of any and all books in the Genealogical Collection in their own mind for research, no book will be loaned from this room. The Genealogical Room opens from the Reference department and is easily accessible, being equipped with tables and chairs for study.

Persons having family histories or related material are invited to place copies in this Library, and gifts of a genealogical nature from organizations will be appreciated.
